Foreword

This school year has been unique in many respects. Realizing this, the 1962 Fare Fac Sampler has tried to emphasize the features which have made the year distinctive. If your memory is getting hazy and the school year of 1961-62 seems no different than any other, we invite you to leaf through the following pages and recall those “once in a life time events” which have given this year individuality.

Engaged in varied activities and belonging to different classes, each of us encountered these events with diverse reactions. As freshmen, we suddenly found ourselves in a complex, bustling factory known as high school. Those of us who were sophomores for the first time enjoyed a year of having a class below us. We juniors became more closely knit than ever before as our class successfully met the challenges imposed by the junior play and prom. As seniors, our reluctance to leave our sheltered childhood life and our desire to be independent met with a head-on collision. Beyond our newly acquired class status, the modern courses, new clubs, and original twists to tradition marked an invigorating change in school life.

Although we may never apply superlatives to the year 1961-1962, we must concede that there never has been, or will be, a school year exactly like this one. Indeed . . “It happens only once in a lifetime.

To Express Our Esteem

We Dedicate

The 1962 Sampler

To

Mr. Cyrus H. Doub

It has long been known that it is impossible to capture with mere words the true spirit and personal attributes of any individual. We can only offer our humble thanks for . . .

...his sincere and active interest in student organizations and their endeavors

...his patience as he voluntarily spends endless hours reviewing and clearing dates for student projects

...his kind, but firm, hand when we have need of guidance or reproof

...his steadfast faith in each student's ability to accept responsibility

...and, finally, his pride in being our true friend and strong supporter.

For all these things, and many more, we respectfully dedicate the 1962 Fare Fac Sampler to Mr. Cyrus H. Doub in his first full year as Principal of Fairfax High School.

ADMINISTRATION

New Concepts In Teaching Enhance Knowledge

With new concepts in teaching, "democracy" as a theme, and improved equipment and facilities, the faculty was able to make long strides in preparing us for the future. Team teaching, the year's most distinctive innovation, provided juniors with specialized and intensified instruction in American literature and history. Foreign language teachers, utilizing our modern language laboratory, placed new emphasis on fundamental conversation and composition skills. Teachers of mathematics stressed different aspects of basic courses, thus giving us a deeper understanding of fundamentals and preparing us for a future in a highly complex world of automation.

However, the interest of the faculty members in us extends far beyond academic instruction; they offer us guidance and assistance in a variety of ways. They set high goals for us to strive toward and high ideals for us to follow through clubs, classrooms, and private conferences. Members of the faculty stand among our most ardent supporters and best friends. Although most aspects of school life change from year to year, we find the faculty members always ready to instruct, advise, and encourage us with an unchanging willingness.

CLASSES

New Precedents And Better Opportunities

We looked forward to the opening of school in the fall with almost as much excitement as we had anticipated its closing three months earlier. For each of us the year ahead offered something different and better than the last. For some it was the last and culminating year, for others the first and uncertain one. Resolves for diligent study disolved in the rush of the football season. Friday tests were forgotten in anticipation of games and parties. But teachers would not let us forget our studies for long. Homeroom was a new addition to our days, which we thankfully utilized to complete the homework that never seemed to get done in the evenings. Winter passed quickly; we showed off Christmas clothes, plodded through melting snow, and attended basketball games. From the first warm day, spring seemed to drag by with unbelievable slowness. At last graduation heralded the end of our year. For each of us there had been successes and failures, embarrassments and triumphs. But they would all blend together in the memories that we would carry through the summer and into the year ahead.

SENIORS

Anticipation And Realization

Although we had spent the summer months planning and waiting for the year ahead, it was still hard to believe we were seniors. At first we found it strange to have no one in a class above us, but finally the privileges to which we were entitled convinced us of our position. At last we were realizing the many long awaited activities and responsibilities. As seniors we felt a responsibility to set an example for underclassmen, for our actions would be imitated by many students who looked up to and admired us. The successes of the school depended upon us. We were the editors of publications, the captains of athletic teams, the leaders of student government, and the presidents of organizations. But beneath the fun and enjoyment of our many activities was a tone of seriousness, for this was our final year. We had to decide, at least partially, the course of our future, whether vocation or college. A seemingly endless series of tests and applications demanded our attention. At last class night and graduation brought a close to our years at Fairfax. The memories we hold may dim, but two values we will keep—education and friendship.

JUNIORS

Great Expectations

With a smile we remembered the awe with which we had viewed Juniors when we were Freshmen. At last we had attained that once envied position and we found it almost as good as we had imagined. Almost as soon as we entered school the whirl of class activities began. Organization and hard work were the keynotes of our successes. For the second straight year we won the homecoming prize for the best float. Our struggles soliciting patrons and selling tickets for the play paid off when we set a new record for patrons and put on two successful performances. We formed the backbone of the varsity teams as well as loyally supporting them from the stands. But we could not forget scholastic achievment either. College Day, as well as reminders from teachers and guidance counselors, kept us constantly aware of our school work. In courses ranging from the new team teaching project, American Civilization, to mechanical drawing, we worked hard to learn and understand. The last few weeks were spent indiligent preparation before the prom. As graduation drew near we could look back on triumphant memories and forward with great expectation.

SOPHOMORES

"Half-Wise And Half-Foolish"

We had struggled as the "baby" rebels for two successive years. It felt good to have someone looking up to us at last. As sophomores we enjoyed many more privileges and opportunities than we had as freshmen. We took larger parts in Student Government, clubs, and musical organizations. In sports, with some of our members on both squads, our allegiences were seperated between the Varsity and the Junior Varsity, but our own class activities served to unite us in a common goal. Teachers seemed oblivious of our activities outside the classroom, since book reviews and insect collections seemed invariably to fall due on the Friday of a dance or game. How eagerly we awaited those weekends when we could accomplish so much, and how remorsefully we returned to school on Mondays with nothing to show for two days of relaxation.

Unable to choose between sophistication and exuberance, we occasionally found ourselves in embarrassing situations. But by the year's end we had a solid foundation in the past, and growing confidence to meet the challenge of the future.

FRESHMEN

Confusion And Excitement

As we entered Fairfax for the first time, we found a world completely different from anything we had ever experienced before. Our first impressions, along with eighth grade fallacies about high school, faded as we adjusted to our surroundings. Although at first even our classmates were unfamiliar to us, in a few weeks we became aquainted with many new friends and accustomed to school traditions. Eagerly we jumped at the chance to complete interscholastically with our own teams. Our enthusiasm paid off in a successful year that prepared many future varsity propects. As we had expected, our courses were harder. Those first report cards, greeted with sighs of thankfulness or cries of displeasure, were the not-so-gentle reminders or our real purpose here–to learn. As our year of new experiences became one of remembrances, we could look forward to the next three years of even better things to come. Although our activities as a class had been few, we took increasing pride in our position . . . the class of 1965.

ACADEMICS

Acquire Greater Significance

At a time when Khrushchev was closing the door to freedom, we were opening our minds to new knowledge. This year more than ever before, we were broadening our mental horizons as we faced the imposing challenges of the New Frontier. The combination of literature, history, and the arts, correlated with team teaching, resulted in American Civilization—a new concept in presenting our entire American heritage. The language laboratory, built only last year, continued to give invaluable service to students, and the chemistry lab proved itself in the past summer as Fairfax High School was chosen to be host for a state-wide summer science program. Also helping to generally improve the curriculum were the many new textbooks added this year. For the first time in several years, textbooks were replaced in large numbers and some courses received entirely new books.

With new courses, new teachers, and new books, we kept apace of our fast moving world and prepared for the responsibilities of a not-so-distant future.

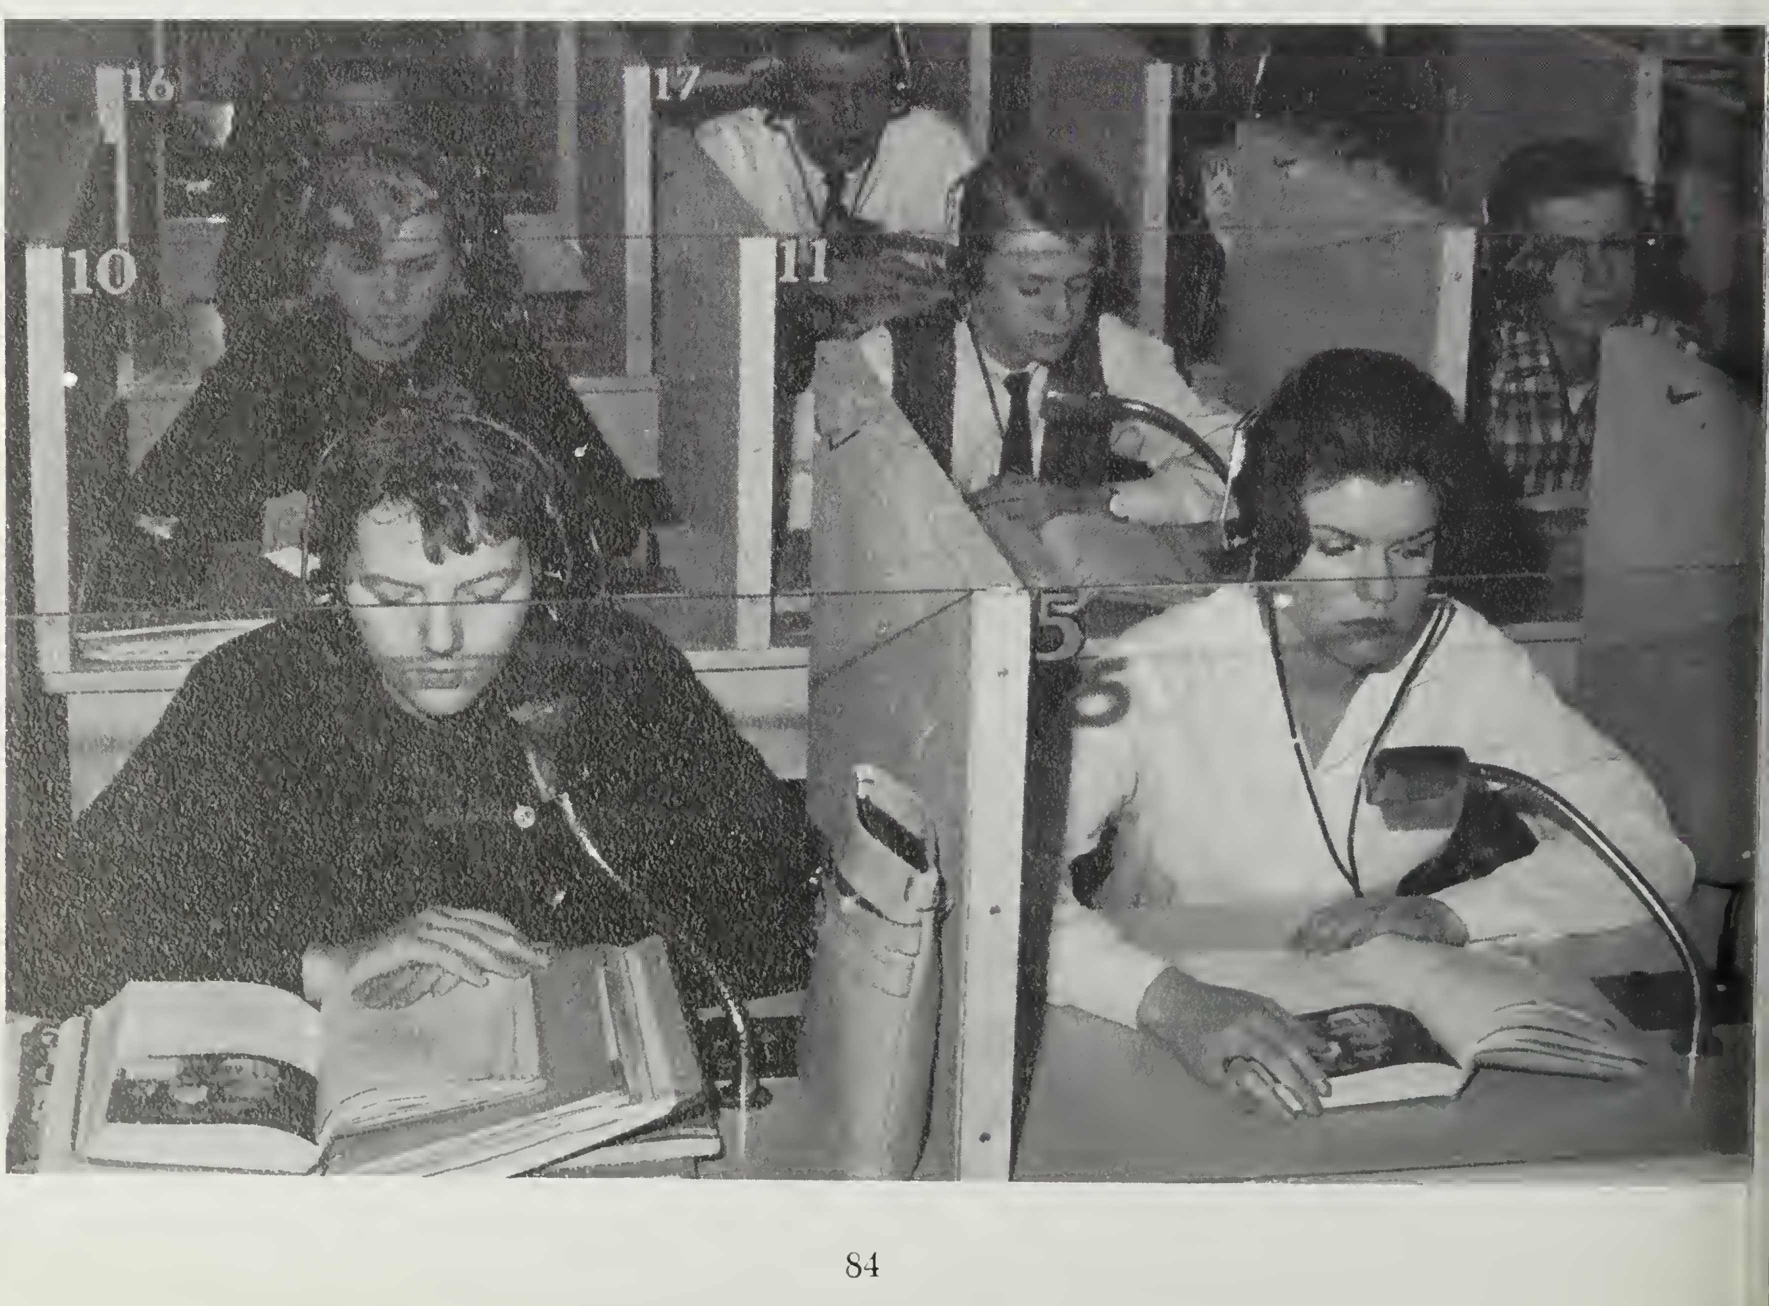
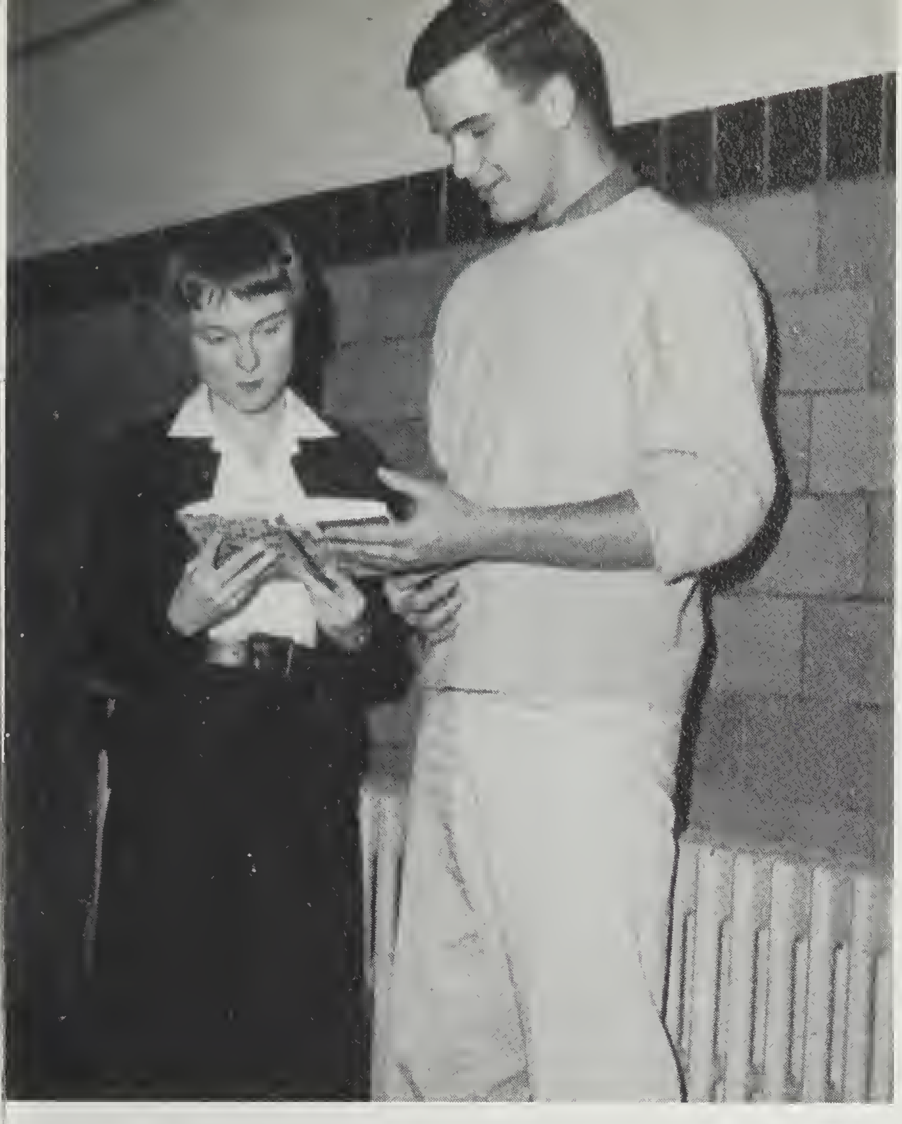
Foreign Languages . . .
A Bridge To International Understanding

Languages have always been of major concern at Fairfax, and the language lab, a great improvement to our language department, continues to serve well. Three languages are offered at F.H.S.—Spanish, French, and Latin—and there are Latin and French clubs as well as a newly formed Spanish Club. Our language teachers are unique personalities as well as good teachers. Every French student can easily recognize a "McConnell" joke, and Spanish students remember with trepidation the terrifying Mr. Caras of their underclassmen days. Mr. Troop's slides make us feel as familiar with the streets of Paris as any Frenchman, and Miss Bowler has a way of making ancient Roman history come alive. Languages are important and becoming more so every day, and with good teachers and facilities, Fairfax is continually expanding its Foreign Language Department to meet the growing demands.

John Meecham and Cynthia Dungan review together in the Spanish Room.

Practice makes perfect in the Language Lab.





Mrs. Neese patiently explains a grammar point to Dick Boring.

Freshmen have fun doing an authentic (?) Chinese play.

English . . .
We Discovered A Rich Heritage Of Literature

The Mad Hatter's tea party comes alive as English students perform parts of Alice in Wonderland.

English is a strong point at Fairfax with many teachers and varied programs. General literature and basic grammar are taught at the lower grades, with seniors taking English letirature and juniors—American literature.

This year, juniors who took the new subject, American Civilization, found an excellent course in American literature offered. Paperbacks and New York Times Book Reviews were used to supplement the standard textbooks in many English classes as well as in American Civilization.

A recent idea in the field of dramatics was used by teachers to better acquaint their students with the playwrights being studied. The pupils form groups and give one or two scenes from a selected play to their English classes.

The S.R.A. Reading Lab is also fairly new at Fairfax. The S.R.A. Lab is used in the classroom and helps improve reading comprehension and speed.

Art Class was a time for quiet learning.

The expansion of the art room a few years ago greatly improved our growing art department. New or improved facilities include sinks, cabinets, tables, and a ceramic kiln. A "show" window provides ample room for the display of student work.

Four years of art are offered at Fairfax starting in Art I, with the basic skills of lettering, perspective and figures. Art II, III, and IV are more advanced studies with each student beginning to specialize in his chosen field of art under the guidance of Miss Marshall, department head. Miss Marshall also works in the capacity of art-coordinator for the American Civilization course.

Art students frequently enter many of the numerous poster contests with much success, and around F.H.S., posters and bulletin boards are visible proof of their artistic skill.

Art . . .

Able Teachers Opened Doors To Beauty And Culture

Music . . .

As evidenced by the many different choruses, choirs, and bands, Fairfax is a very musical school. Mr. Wygal, head of the vocal department, and Mr. Fuller, director of the band, have worked hard to develop a fine music department and encourage music appreciation.

Singing opportunities available to F.H.S. students are Girls' Chorus, Mixed Chorus, Senior Choir and Madrigals. The Band is a chance for students who play instruments to continue their musical education.

Both divisions of the music department hold concerts during the year; among these are the band's winter concert and clinic concert, and Senior Choir's winter and spring concerts. Besides these, various assemblies during the year give the student body a chance to hear their music department.

Our prize winning band has won many awards throughout the state and marches each year, along with Drill Team and Majorettes, at the Apple Blossom Festival in Winchester. For the past two years, Fairfax has ranked first among all participating bands.

Fairfax has an excellent music department which will continue to not only provide outstanding entertainment, but also a valuable addition to our curriculum.

Home Economics offers a varied, interesting, and practical program. First year students study personal grooming, personal development, and making homes safe, healthful, and attractive. During the second year course, girls receive training in clothing, child care, nutrition, home nursing, food preservation, and housing. Third year students learn how to balance family budgets, plan meals, select china and silverware, and arrange flowers. They also work on projects at home as well as in class.

Home economics provides a solid background for jobs in many fields such as dietetics, interior decoration, social work, and the textile industry.

Industrial Arts . . .

Jerry Smith and Tim Hogan find mechanical drawing easier with the professional guidance of Mr. Dowling.

One of the most worthwhile sections of our curriculum at Fairfax High School is the Industrial Arts Department. This Department has the important function of giving students the vocational training they will need if they plan to start to work immediately after high school. At Fairfax this objective is effectively accomplished in our wood, metal, and print shops with the help of up-to-date and specialized equipment. Besides vocational training, the Industrial Arts Department also completes the well rounded education of many academic students, making it an extremely beneficial aspect of F.H.S. curriculum.

Social Studies . . . World, People And

Problems, Past And Present

The Social Studies department is one of the largest and most important at Fairfax. History, government, current events, economics—all are very important fields of knowledge today.

Geography, offered usually to freshmen and sophomores, acquaints students with the various continents and nations. Location, principle cities, rivers and ports, chief products, historical significance, and recent developments—these are necessary facts to be learned about each country.

History is not dead; in fact, World History often seems to be one of the most vital and far-reaching courses. Concerned not only with musty dates and ancient wars, World History traces the development of the present world through a series of important events and possible turning points of history whose effects are still felt today.

As one short but important thread of world history, American history follows the progress of the American nation from its early beginning to the present. Major personalities and events are studied, along with the basic trends and movements marking the history of our democracy.

American Civilization, combining American literature and history, attempts to present the major facets of the many-sided personality of America. Art and music are also studied in A. C. to more fully complete the picture of the United States, past and present.

Necessary to every citizen's understanding of our democracy is American Government. It presents a history of the American system of government and its variations at different levels. To better understand its mechanics, students set up an actual government in their class.

Economics and sociology, two relatively new courses at Fairfax, give the basics of the American economic system. Tracing the development of major trends and patterns of economics and thought, it is a valuable course especially if used as a stepping stone for college economics.

Creative Writing . . . Imagination and Skill

Headed by Mrs. Neese, Creative Writing is an opportunity to improve writing skills and techniques. The students also learn to recognize good and bad writing by doing large amounts of critical reading. Required writing includes poetry, short stories, essays and critical reviews. Frequent assignments give students much needed practice in writing smoothly and with imagination. Creative writing is an interesting class which can be a help to almost any student.

Linda Fritzen tries hard to be creative.

Public Speaking . . . Gaining Poise in Speaking

Every Public Speaking student is familiar with the "5 P's," almost the first thing taught. The "5 P's" are merely guides for more successful public speaking and include pause, poise, posture, phrasing, and pitch. Other techniques used to advantage are deep breathing exercises and practicing vowel sounds. Debating, sales talks, panels and introductory speeches are among the many different types of public speaking taught.

Public Speaking students warm up with deep breathing exercises.

Journalism . . . Headlines and Deadlines

Those who (1) think objectively, (2) thrive in the hectic world of the newspaper and free press, (3) express themselves laconicly (4) write with a catchy style, succeed in journalism. Amid busy deadlines for the class paper, the Fairfax Journal, Mr. Wayne Chester teaches his students the basic fundamentals of the writing fields and encourages them to practice their skills by writing for FAIR FACTS.

Physical Education . . .
Fitness and Sportsmanship

Physical education at Fairfax, besides being aimed towards the development of a healthy body, is designed to promote a sense of sportsmanship and team spirit. Team sports are emphasized but several excellent individual sports such as archery, golf, wrestling, and tennis are also offered.

Another main feature of the F.H.S. Physical Education department is the Driver Education program. This program teaches students the basic mechanics of a car, fundamental safety rules and traffic laws, and beginning instruction in driving a car.

Library . . .
A Storehouse of Knowledge

This year the library added many new volumes to its shelves—both to the reference and general section and to the fiction section. These valuable additions made our research more fruitful and our pleasure reading more varied. Although the hours we spent in the library may have seemed drudgery to us then, they were invaluable in preparing us for college research.

The library was often a place to catch up on homework as well as a place to do research work.

Science . . . Project Deadlines Brought Confused

The chemistry classes this year were greatly aided by our new, modern laboratory. With new facilities, such experiments as titration, hydrolysis, and generation of gases were more easily performed and had a greater meaning to the students. A radiation lab aided instruction in the area of atomic structure as well as chemical valence, and a study of the elements.

Bottles, bottles, and more bottles—and probably all in need of washing by hardworking lab assistants.

The physics course at Fairfax High School includes a complete coverage of all the basic areas of the subject—heat, light, mechanics, sound, and nuclear physics. Experiments with pulleys, expansion rods, and convex mirrors impressed the students and helped explain the complexities of our environment.

Panic As We Applied Our Newly Acquired Knowledge

Biology opened up the world of living things to inquiring freshmen and sophomores. The course is divided into two sections, botany and zoology. During the botany section, students are usually required to submit a collection of leaves or other plants, while zoology involves disection and instruction in the use of the microscope and other laboratory apparatus. New textbooks were added this year, and the results of good textbooks and teachers were visible at the annual Science Fair.

David Manlove with the enthusiastic (?) assistance of Jerri Rigoulot examines an earthworm in the biology lab.

Both general science and earth science are courses designed to give mainly a wide coverage of the subject. General Science includes sections on many fields of science, such as astronomy, geology, and biology. Earth science is devoted mainly to geology and gives a basic background in the earth, natural phenomena, and minerals.

Mathematics . . .
Compasses And Protractors Became Indispensable

The Math Department, headed by Mrs. Kathleen Seek, offers a variety of subjects for F.H.S. students. Quadratic equations, irrational numbers and hyperbolic curves are the by-words of Algebra I and Algebra II students. What trigonometry student doesn't know that the cosine squared plus the sine squared of an angle equals one? Solid Geometry students, lost in the realms of three dimension, envy the Plane Geometry dabblers and their two dimensional figures. The students of business math and general math, and ninth grade math learn the concepts of practical arithmetic, banking, and percentages.

Enterprising students and mathematics fanatics can lay out a path of hard work for themselves in the advanced math program. Those with an outstanding ability in the field of numbers can take Algebra I in their eighth grade year, Algebra II in ninth, Plane Geometry in tenth, Trig/Solid in their junior year, and a final year of Advanced Algebra and Analysis. Much hard work and energy goes into this kind of course, but a feeling of accomplishment and an advanced preparation for college are the worthy fruits of the labor.

It sometimes seems to take the whole blackboard for one of those Algebra equations!

Business Education . . .

The World Of Business No Longer Seemed Hopelessly

Willard Shelton practices on an adding machine in his General Business class.

The business educational courses of Fairfax High School are so complete in themselves that students can enter the business world almost immediately upon graduation if they wish. The various subjects, which are offered, are typing, shorthand, bookkeeping, and clerical practice. Typing, a basic course for any business profession, is offered for two years at F.H.S. Besides general skills, students learn how to type business letters, envelopes, and other business transaction forms. Shorthand, another "must" for secretarial jobs, is also a valuable lesson in notetaking for interested college students. For students interested in accounting, bookkeeping provides an opportunity to learn basic systems of accounting and business math.

Complicated As We Prepared For Future Careers

The V.O.T., D.E., and I.C.T. student work programs enable commercial students to gain experience before graduation. This provides a basis for making eventual decisions about jobs. The student who attends a junior college is well qualified to take the advanced courses after his high school training. Some of the many interesting jobs available to a secretary are in the medical, legal, private, and industrial fields. With the demand for well-trained secretaries and bookkeepers growing, business education becomes more valuable each year.

ACTIVITIES . . .

New And Varied Outlets For Our Enthusiasm

The school days at Fairfax just didn't seem to hold enough hours as the various club members rushed from homework to meetings and rehearsals. Under the sponsorship of the Key Club, Hilke, our first girl foreign exchange student, gave us a new understanding of our neighbors across the sea. For the first time, members of the science clubs worked in cooperation with the Fairfax County Hospital, exploring problems of our scientific age. Rebel journalists and writers strived for imaginative and original publications. The Pep Club members racked their brains for spirit building stunts, helping to mold our student body into a hard-working unit and willing to support the many activities of Fairfax. Our choral department and band gave many successful concerts throughout the year, increasing pride in our school. The welfare and magazine drives were the crowning achievements to a year of vigorous effort by the Student Government. Rebel spirit and enthusiasm provided lasting examples of our accomplishments.

Student Government . . . The Keystone Of

Keeping our goal in mind, the 1961-1962 Student Government strove to increase co-operation with the faculty and administration and build the spirit of the student body to one of unity of interest and purpose. This resulted in an increased interest and support fostered by the newly introduced homeroom period, school-wide participation in formulating and adopting the new Activity Record, and introduction of the "Rebel Spirit," revised student handbook, and "Insight," the monthly supplication of the "Who What Where When," available to the entire student body. This interest helped carry out the traditional Leadership Training Program, Citizenship Week, Welfare Drive, Magazine Drive, and International Week.

The group effort necessary to successfully execute these activities has made every one more aware of the need for concentrated, continued, and co-operative work, and their by-products; the satisfaction and enjoyment gained from a job well-done.

For many of us work on the yearbook began early in the summer, for the yearbook must be carefully planned page by page before school starts. When the new staff members first came to class in September, they saw the yearbook as a "dummy," which is actually a book of graph paper with each page completely laid out. Gradually the copy and the pictures accumulated as more and more page envelopes were filled and the pages materialized before our eyes. No matter how conscientious we tried to be, the numerous deadlines inevitably seemed to arrive with no forewarning and staff members had to spend long hours after school proofreading and making final adjustments while our photographers industriously worked in our new dark room developing and printing pictures which were due in twenty minutes.

Those of us on this year's staff had a special objective in preparing the yearbook, we wanted to make it different from ever before—a book which would stand out in the minds of its readers for years to come. As we worked toward this challenging goal, the year passed quickly and, we hope, successfully.

Fair Facts . . . Efforts To Create Interest And

This year those of us on newspaper staff tried especially to emphasize current events through "places to go, things to read, things to see" columns. We tried to promote interest in "the world around us" in an informative but interesting manner. The staff was generally inexperienced, but by learning as we worked, we tried to live up to the "All-American" rating of last year's paper. Our main difficulty was meeting deadlines, the common plight of newspaper writers. But we usually managed to squeeze a story in between homework assignments or before rushing to a meeting or a game we had to cover. Special six page editions for Homecoming, Christmas, and graduation required extra efforts, but after their completion there was still no time to sit back with expressions of satisfaction and relief. Thanks to our sponsor, Mr. Chester, we were constantly instilled with the spirit necessary to produce a paper the staff and our school would be proud of.

REBELATIONS

Rebelations staff members look over entries for the upcoming edition.

Rebelations . . . Encourages Literary Creativity

When we entered our new Rebelations office this fall, we fell in love with it, but soon we discovered that first impressions aren't always the right ones. We decided that it was nothing more than a redecorated broom closet and was barely large enough to hold our books and papers, much less our large staff.

Our small room witnessed many strange discussions and projects, from posters for the English Department to the judging of modern art for both our winter and spring editions. Our main projects this year were putting out the magazine and keeping the school supplied with paperbacks. All kinds of books were in demand, from Dennis the Menace to DeToqueville.

Examples of our work were evident in many phases of school activities. We sponsored the Scholastic Prose and Poetry Contests as well as contests to obtain material for our magazine. In Rebelations we included book reviews, poetry, short stories, along with art work done by students. We feel that this is outstanding evidence of the hard work produced in our little cubicle.

The Virgil Carrington Jones Chapter of the Quill and Scroll Society is an honorary organization for journalists. This society inducted the members of the Fare Fac Sampler—school yearbook, the Fair Facts—school newspaper, and Rebelations—the school literary magazine, who displayed outstanding effort and initiative on their publications staffs during the year. Besides recognizing the superior work of these individuals, Quill and Scroll strived to raise the standards of high school journalism.

The highlights of the year were the inductions of new members held in February and May. Mr. Virgil Carrington Jones, local Civil War author for whom the chapter was named, as guest speaker of the February inductions, welcomed the new members into his brotherhood of journalists. All members were proud to wear their pins, signs of their superior achievement.

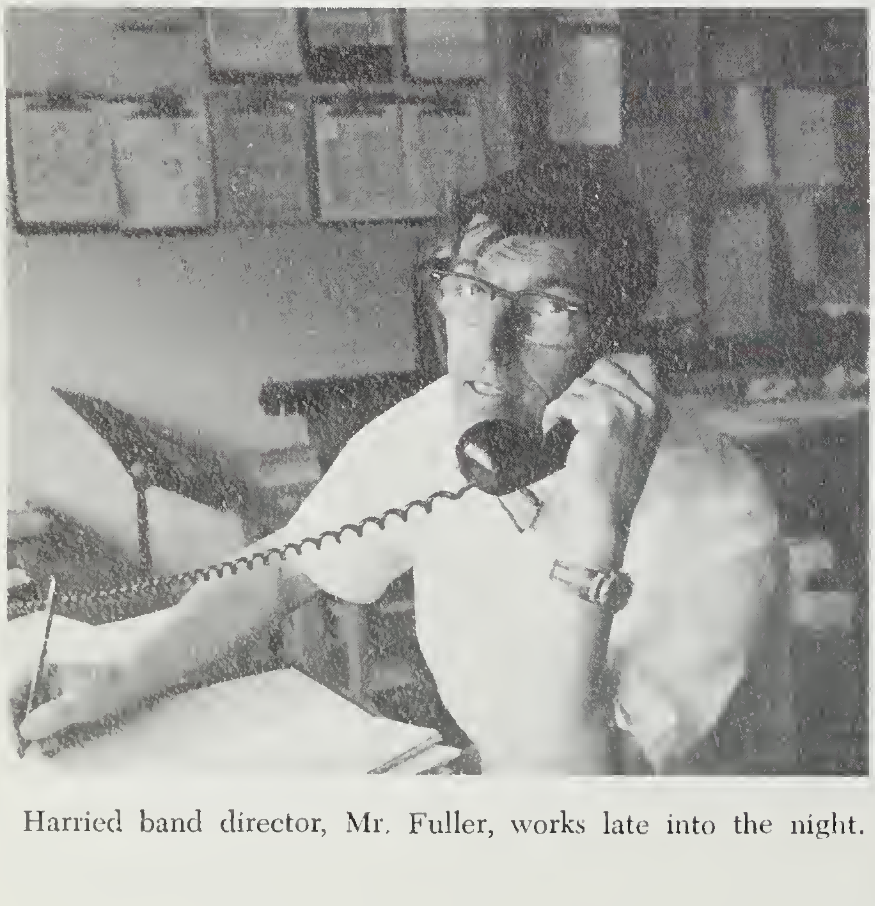
Rebel Band . . . Hard Work Produces High -



Harried band director, Mr. Fuller, works late into the night.

The efforts of our band produced a year of enjoyment and enrichment. Frost-bitten feet beat time to our spirited fight songs as we blasted out encouragement to our team. But half-time shows and pep rallys were only a small part of our activities. Much of our time was spent preparing for the Winter Concert, Clinic Concert, and the Music Festival, but it was well worth it when we received a first rating from each of the three judges.

A new "first" for Fairfax High was achieved when we sponsored a visit of the well know Glenn Miller Band. The Ham and Oyster Dinner also provided much needed money, which enabled us to put on a successful Sweetheart Dance, and helped pay for last year's new uniforms. The playing of "Pomp and Circumstance" at graduation brought to a close a busy and very successful year.

With gay smiles and high kicks, we of the Majorettes Squad were in action during the football season, accompanying the band wherever it went. From pep rallies and bonfires to half-time ceremonies, from the gay "Charleston" at the Annandale game to the shivering rain-soaked performance at the John Glenn Parade in Washington, the nine of us twirled our way through with undaunted spirits. With our talented, new mascot, we constantly worked on perfecting new routines.

The Fairfax High Drill Team practiced diligently throughout the school year. Striving to give a good performance, we swung our flags with precision and originality. Our two solo twirlers showed us more difficult flag tricks and twirls, as the entire group marched smartly into formations on the field.

Mixed Chorus . . . Explorations Of The Musical Scale

Since both choruses were open to all students, most of us knew nothing about music when we first started the school year. Mr. Wygal had a task in teaching us the musical symbols, the scales, the correct pronunciation, and the proper method of breathing. Trying to get us all on key at the same time was the main objective of the year. Both the Girls' Chorus and the Mixed Chorus performed at the Winter and Spring concerts.

The Mixed Chorus was exceptionally good this year; the attributing factor was the increased number of boys. We presented more difficult music than that which is usually attempted by Mixed Choruses and succeeded in presenting an enjoyable program. Mr. Keller, senior student teacher from American University, helped Mr. Wygal to prepare us for our big performance in the Spring Music Festival.

Assemblies enabled us to communicate to others of F.H.S. the wonderful world of music. Additional events which helped tie the bonds between us were the concerts, radio programs, candy sales, the Snowball Dance, and the State Festival. Art Club . . . Expressions Of Originality And Talent

Throughout the year the Art Club sponsored many activities. Early in the year we labored over our homecoming float, which tied for third place. During Christmas, we made a booklet of the story "The Littlest Angel" and presented it, along with two large stockings filled with candy, to the Children's Ward of Fairfax Hospital. We also made the colorful Christmas decorations for the cafeteria. In the spring a bake sale, an art show, and a contest for the best work done in the club were held. The two main events of the year, however, were the trip to New York to see the Guggenheim Museum and the National Museum of Modern Art, and the making of a mural of the school crest, which was presented to the school by the members of our club.

As members of the Future Homemakers of America, we furthered our knowledge of homemaking as we worked toward our goals. We learned to serve our school by organizing and running the Red Cross Drive, and by operating the Breakfast Club in the cafeteria before school. We worked to serve our community by taking cookies to the old folks' home and Christmas presents to the children's wards in the Fairfax Hospital. We enjoyed field trips to Washington and two nursing homes. During the year we learned more about the many facets of homemaking. Our very successful Mother-Father-Daughter Banquet was the highlight of our club's social activities. All our projects served as learning experiences and made this year one of the most enjoyable and rewarding the F.H.A. has ever had.

Key Club members encourage students to vote for the "Ugly Boy."

Dedicated to serving our school and community, our two organizations worked tirelessly throughout the year, either together or individually, toward the common goal of assisting the administration and our local civic associations. We worked at times as rivals such as in the Homecoming Float Contest or separately in the Ugly Boy and Miss Fairfax contests, but we did learn the value and pleasure of working together as we cooperatively sealed envelopes for the Tuberculosis Association, attended conventions simultaneously in Norfolk, and pooled our efforts in the American Field Service Program: the Key Club being in charge of funds for the exchange student and the Keyettes for an American abroad. By the end of the school year, we had a feeling of allegiance and were proud of our accomplishments in this purposeful year.

NATIONAL
LEADERS

Claudia Sale explains Character, the first of the cardinal principles of the Senior Honor Society.

The Gorden E. Smith Chapter of the National Honor Society held two inductions during the school year. Since we only had six members to start the year, we held the October induction by candlelight in the library. This was the first time parents were invited for the ceremony. Along with the help of the Junior Honor Society, our Christmas Card Drive was quite successful, and the money provided the funds necessary for the two scholarships presented by the organiation. Spring activities include the annual Easter Assembly and April induction. This induction was small, but it was held during an assembly in the traditional fashion. A reception was held after school for the new members. We feel that this year was valuable in promoting those qualities which make up a well-rounded student: character, scholarship, leadership, and service.

Junior Honor Society . . . A Goal For Underclassmen

As a group recognizing superior students in the academic field, our society set a high set of standards. Members were chosen on the basis of citizenship, leadership, scholarship, service, and character. They were inducted in two groups during the first and second semesters. On becoming members they were called upon to see their initiative, energy, talents and most of all time to carry out projects throughout the year. One of the largest projects was the Chrismas Card Sale which proved to be very successful. Other service projects were carried out throughout the school. Money was given to worthwhile projects such as the Senior Honor Society Scholarships and the Exchange Student Program.

Pep Club . . . Supports All School Activities

Pep Club organized cavalcades to away games to carry spirit in a unified group.

Almost as soon as the year began, our activities to boost enthusiasm and to build support started. By announcing games, organizing cavalcades and cheering wildly ourselves, we assured the teams and the cheerleaders of solid support. With pep rallies and notes on lockers, we gave encouragement and recognition to individuals. The bulletin boards and huge signs we spent so much time preparing were appreciated by both the athletes and the students. All our activities, however, were not directed in support of only the Varsity sports. We urged attendance at girls' games and at the Junior Varsity and Freshmen sports and events, and strove to recognize these athletes' achievements. In the spring, the club presented the annual Spring Swing dance. As our activities ended, we felt responsible in part for the success of our team and noted with pride our accomplishments toward uniting the school.

The Rebel Thirft plan began this year with experience and knowledge of one year of operation behind it. The bank had grown from its meager beginning to a sizable and efficient operation. As well as being a great convenience to the school, it was an invaluable aid to the business students who worked in its office. They learned not only book-keeping techniques, but also the mechanics of operating a banking service. The system encouraged thrift and saving by individuals and offered opportunities to classes and organizations who deposited their funds. Student Government, by sponsoring this plan, was providing the school with a useful service for frugal students.

Senior Science Club . . . Investigates A Modern Age

As leaders in our field, we found ourselves being looked up to for guidance and assistance. Our efforts went in many directions: we served as assistants in the science labs doing everything from finding lost parts in a frog to helping chemistry students make cokes in class. We helped set up the science fair and members of our club worked in co-operation with Fairfax Hospital on a research project by encouraging friends to give blood and then using it in our experiments.

Biology Club . . . Getting To Know The World Around Us

Biology Club Officers: Alan Prince, Judy Taylor, and Regina Peterson, work in their lab under the supervision of their sponsor, Mr. Tulusty.

In 1961-62, the Biology Club tried to fulfill its purpose of furthering the biological sciences within Fairfax High. We conducted projects and held a reception for a prominent scientist. Our club also helped the biology department by making slides of flowers, and later in the year we aided the Senior Science Club in its projects. One of the highlights was the reception for Dr. Lough of AEC, who spoke to the science classes on radioactivity.

Varsity Club . . . Proudly Wear The Fairfax Letter

Officers of the Varsity Club: Bruce Keiley, Ron Tankersly, Steve Katz, Jim Farley, and Bob Barnes, discuss plans for the inductions.

Arousing interest among underclass boys, the members of the Varsity Club showed the benefits and rewards of high school athletics. As representatives of the school's sports program, it was our ambition to inspire more participation in the sports of football, track, tennis, and cross-country. By selling "Victory" vests, the club began to raise money for an oxygen unit which would be used by the Physical Education department for athletic events as well as emergencies. We were proud to represent the school, whether on the golf course or on the basketball court.

Riding Club . . . Improves Horsemanship

Riding Club meant more to us than occasional trail rides. It meant hard work, and much time spent practicing and perfecting. But this is just what we enjoy. Most of afternoons this year were spent preparing for local horse shows or some other competitive event. Besides riding, the members listened to various speakers and learned about different types of riding equipment. Trail rides offered a chance for recreation for the club members.

Riding Club Officers: Dale Atkins and Sandy Aiken, on a quiet ride through the woods.

French Club Members: Kathy Mueller, George Roberts, Ron Haas, Ann Heaven, and Mr. McConnell, waiting to leave for the caroling party.

In the past year the French Club engaged in several activities which have become almost traditional. The first, and probably the most important, is the Christmas Caroling Party. Singing French carols from door to door was entertaining for us and, we hope, for the community. During the spring the club planned a field trip to a French art gallery and had dinner at a French restaurant. The main purpose of our club is to learn more about the French people and their customs, and to have fun doing it.

Latin Club . . .

The Latin Club, sponsored by Miss Bowler, is one of the oldest clubs in the school. It is affiliated with the National and State Junior Classical League. The club totals sixty-eight and meets once a month. In December we held a highly successful "Amateur Hour" which gave us fifteen dollars for the Latin Club Scholarship Fund. This scholarship is available to any senior who has taken Latin and plans to continue it in college. Each year the Latin Club sends fourteen students to the Latin Club Tournament of Northern Virginia. The winners then go to the State and National Tournaments. This year we sent four first year students, four second year students, and six third year students.

Latin Club Officers: Cyril Barsch, Dwight Wooster, Miss Bowler, sponsor; Roseanne Cawley, and Roger Latham.

This year the interest in starting a Spanish Club was overwhelming. After the constitution was written and officers were elected, the regular meetings started and things began to get on an orderly path. On the regular meeting agenda were a variety of programs including learning Silent Night in Spanish, seeing films of South America, and listening to Spanish music explained by Francisco Armendaria, a Mexican exchange student.

The club's aim was to strengthen our friendship with Latin American countries and to learn more about them, our first activity was a trip to the Spanish restaurant and movie. Later trips to the Spanish Embassy and the Pan American Building were planned.

We are very proud of the progress made in the Spanish Club this year and hope that it will continue to be a prominent club in the years to come.

Spanish Club Officers: Dave Wise, Kim Castro, Tony Mozingo, Pat Williams.

Debate Club . . . Presenting And Defending Our Ideas

Debate team members: John Gaides, Bud Moyer, Stuart Loffborogh, Miss Bowler, sponsor; Karen Tompkins Tim Toompas, Bob Williams.

We gained invaluable experience in organizing our material and avoiding ambiguity in expressing our ideas. After practicing self-control even in the most heated discussions, we gradually gained poise and confidence. Both our affirmative and negative teams can boast of victories in debates over the question of federal grants to public schools. In fact, the affirmative team won all of their first six debates. After a year's experience in the Debate Club, we saw definite improvement in our ability to organize our information quickly, interrogate expertly, and to deftly maneuver our way out of difficult situations.

Patrols . . . Promote Safety And Caution

Patrols continued to attempt to maintain peace and quiet on the trips to and from school though it was sometimes hard calming down enthusiastic classmates leaving school early because of the sudden snowstorm. Their job was to keep noise down to a minimum so the drivers could make the daily trip safely. Sometimes it took a lot of nerve crossing students on the main highways. You never knew if those cars were going to stop or not.

Monitors were presented with new responsibilities trying to keep order and quiet in the halls after the main hall was opened to through traffic during the lunch periods. They were armed with a new weapon to combat the increased number of students in the halls. This was a detention hall maintained during the lunch periods. The appearance of the monitors was greatly improved by their new blue blazers which acted as their badge of authority.

D.E. Club . . . Training And Experience

The Distributive Education program, sponsored by Mr. Cheshire, was established for those students who wish to have experience working while attending high school. These students attend school for only part of the day and work for the remainder. Some projects and activities of the club are dances, including a Christmas Welfare Dance, parties, picnics, and contests with other schools which have a "D. E." program.

The main goal of the Industrial Co-operative Training program is to prepare a student for a job after graduating from school. They learn how to cope with the problems which confront the employees and the employer. Our club worked in co-operation with the various I.C.T. Clubs throughout the district and state. The sponsor of our Industrial Co-operative Training program was Mr. Wilson.

ATHLETICS

Hey, grubby ole mud turtle!

Unequaled Display Of Spirit And Teamwork

Pegless!

With the assurance that our student body was behind them in every way, Fairfax teams made an enviable name for themselves in competition throughout Northern Virginia. With the fine coaching of our staff often spelling the difference between victory and defeat, our opponents were assured of a struggle to the end. Behind the blaring of the cavalcades, the cheering and screaming of the crowds, the exuberence of our cheerleaders and excitement of a team in action, stood the long hours all our athletes devoted to practice. This work put in by our players and coaches, the friendships formed with others throughout Northern Virginia and the state, and the experiences gained in competition will mean more ultimately than either victories or losses on the scoreboard. More than ever before our students continued to uphold the proud Fairfax High tradition of an enthusiasm for sports which goes hand in hand with an interest in their more prosaic studies in school.

Varsity . . . Add A Little Pep, Add A Little Might

The 1961-62 Varsity Cheerleaders encouraged spectators and teams alike through Fairfax's successful football and basketball seasons. Beginning in the summer, pom-poms, megaphones, new cheers, and voo-doo dolls which were sold in school were completed. And through much practice and hard work, the fortunate nine succeeded in becoming an organized and active squad.

From the first game of each season right up to the last one, the cheerleaders, led by their captain, Pat Lake, aroused spirits and enthusiasm. Downpours during football season dampened everything except this spirit boosted by the girls, and this enthusiasm continued through basketball season.

J.V. . . . We're Blue, We're White, We're Dynamite

With smiles, enthusiasm, and strong voices, the 1961-62 J. V. Cheerleaders boosted the morale of our Junior Varsity teams throughout the school year. Beginning with tryouts in May, 1961, this spirited group worked and practiced constantly over the summer, kept spirits high during six J. V. Football games, and cheered proudly during Basketball season in new uniforms.

The Ninth Grade Cheerleaders, led by Captain Susan Dewey, successfully overcame the drawback of late tryouts, in September, 1961, by hard and willing practice. Despite the occasional cheer mix-ups, as "Get the ball, you-all" when Fairfax had the ball, the Freshman girls enthusiastically led the Baby Rebel teams to victory.

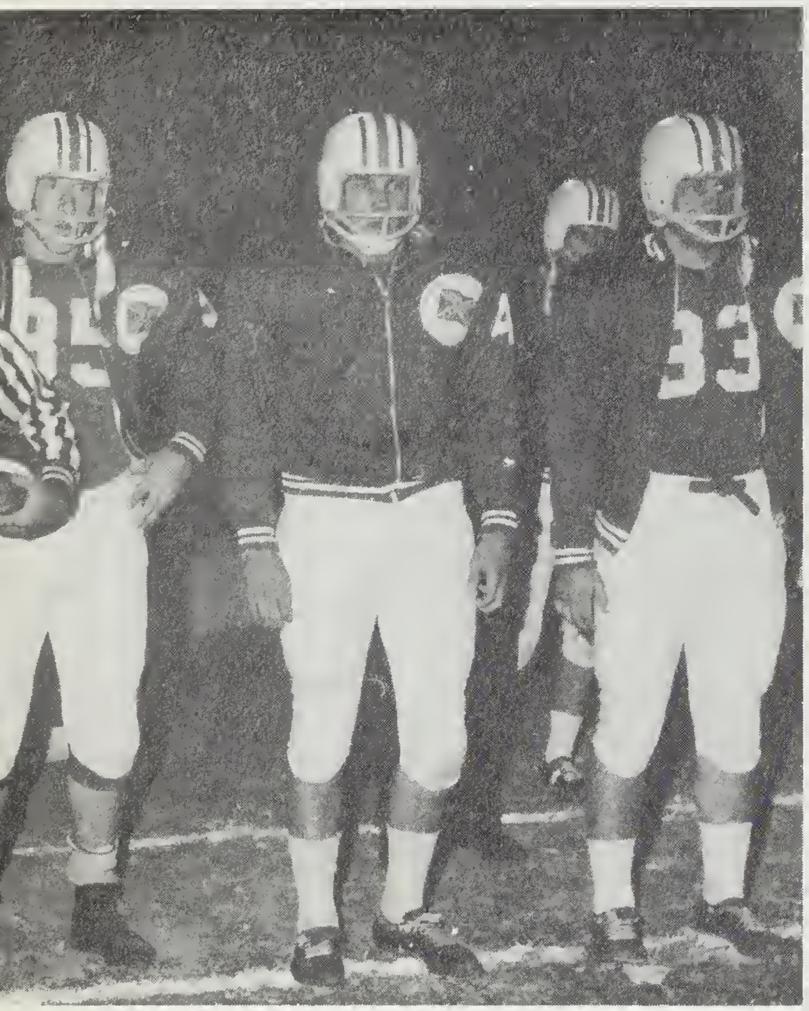
Varsity Football . . . Go Rebels Go!



Tri-Captains White, Kiely, and Jensen await the toss.

Our scoreboard, although registering a respectable 5-5 figure, does not adequately represent the spirit our players demonstrated against the many vastly improved teams of this year's season.

In the traditional opening game with W-L, a 14-6 loss, our lone score via the air, marked the first touchdown pass thrown against W-L in three years. Our new rivalry with Madison was marked by a 19-0 victory, the second such score in our two years of competition with this school. During the following three weeks spirits drooped at Fairfax as we lost to G. W. 33-13, McLean 13-0, and Mt. Vernon 21-6. But by Homecoming, the Rebels got back on the victory trail by downing Falls Church 28-12; this was followed by a 6-0 win over Hammond and a 14-13 defeat of Groveton. The Fairfax-Lee game provided the most suspenseful game of the year with a 17-14 victory for Fairfax; the decisive field goal was the second in Rebel history. In our last game of the year we lost to a revived Annandale squad 20-6 to even out the season 5-5.

Plagued by numerous injuries and the loss of many sophomores to the Varsity team, the Junior Varsity Football Squad turned in a 0-5-1 record. This record is not at all indicative of the effort put out by these boys, and the lessons in both sportsmanship and football that they learned from Coach Helmbreck. The year's best games were played against the powerful Flint Hill Varsity, and the Madison Junior Varsity; they lost the first 14-0, and tied Madison 14-14.

Freshmen Football . . . Rebels Born And Rebels Bred

Freshman football got off to a strong start this year when ninety-two boys, the largest number in the history of Fairfax High School, tried out. Coaches Tabor and Rodgers had big plans for their team as they whipped the boys into a working unit with two to three hours of practice daily. The fact that seven of the freshman players moved up to Varsity after their season was over is proof of the tremendous potential on the ninth grade squad.

Varsity Hockey . . . Got The Coach, Team, Pep, Steam

Battling mud, wind, and rain, our hard-practicing Varsity girls, coached by Miss Ashton, scored another victorious hit for Fairfax. Ending their season with three wins, two losses, and one tied game, this year's Hockey team furnished action, variety and competition. Although Hockey has been called the game of "bruised shins and smashed fingers," our Varsity team came through with no casulties except one broken stick!

The squad of fourteen, led by co-captain, Madeline Ford and Connie Webb, was fortunate to have eight seniors among them. Although these valuable girls will not be returning next year, we have high hopes for the remaining players—who include, for the first time, a freshman, Ellen Venable.

The spirited girls on our 1961-62 Junior Varsity Hockey Team worked as hard as their Varsity teammates, fighting on the field to make fame for Fairfax High.

Spreading the Rebel spirit, the girls carried good sportsmanship to every school they visited. Bruised knees and mud-spattered uniforms left them undaunted as they returned on the bus, singing constantly. Fun and hard work were their rewards, as they exercised daily, practicing the skills of the game, running laps around the field, and then heading for the showers.

Always pushing toward victory, these girls showed plenty of teamwork—good offense and defense—and then successfully ended their season with three wins, one tie, and only one loss.

The team was aided for the third consecutive year by the presence of Bob White, John Shreves, and Jim Farley. Our three heavy-weights, Ron Tankersley, Bob White, and Jim Jensen scored four "turkeys" (three pins in a row) during the season, saving the match for Fairfax on several occasions. In the 1962 State Meet, team captain Bob White placed second in the state in the 178 lb. class, the best thus far in our three year wrestling history.

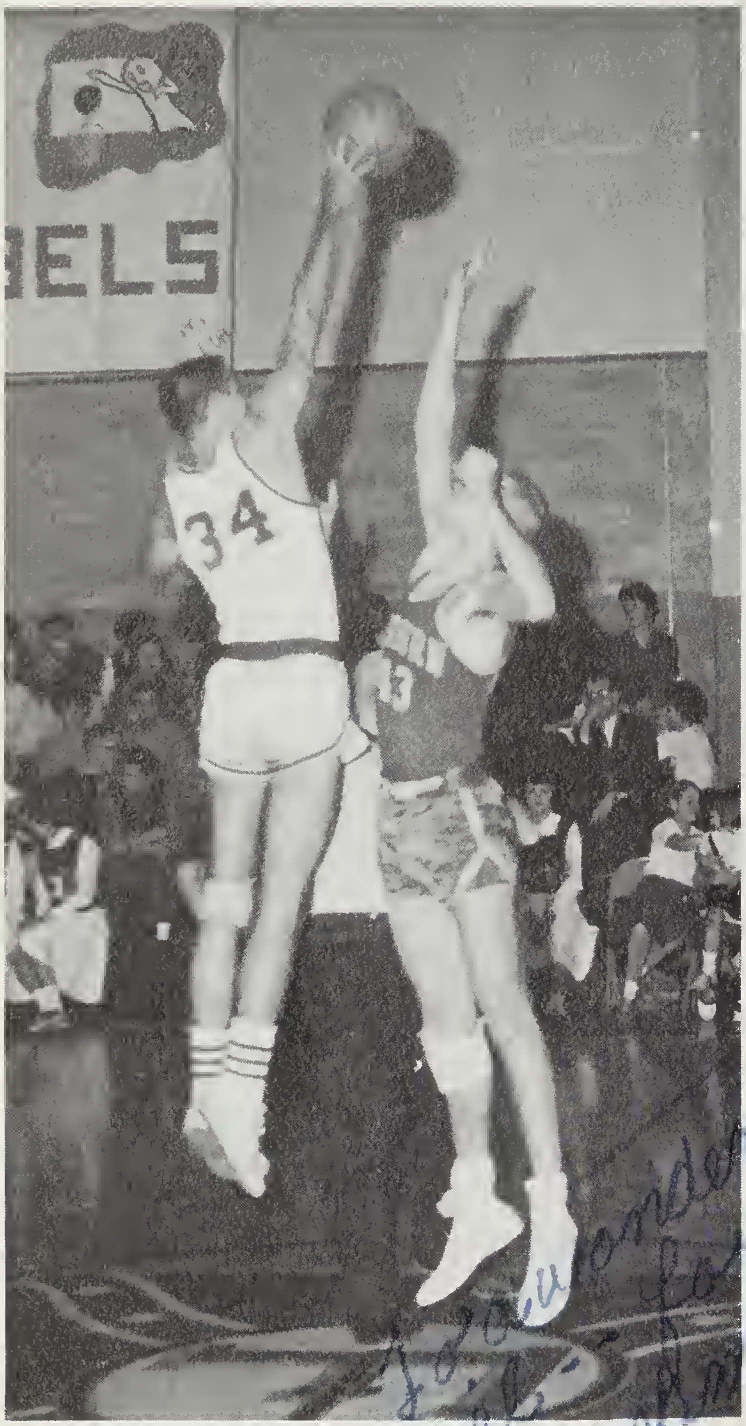
Varsity Basketball . . .



Hampered by an extreme lack of height and experienced players, the 1962 Varsity basketball team finished the season with a 6-8 league record and an overall record of 9-9. Senior co-captains, Bruce Kiely—the team's leading scorer—and J. D. Moore—the number two man in rebounds and scoring, and Junior Jon Schulstad, were the Rebels' only experienced players. Sophomore Scott Huntley's height proved an asset to the team under the boards, and the ball handling of Junior Ed Lonergan, a transfer student, who became eligible at mid-term, helped spark a late season which almost led the Rebels to berth in the Northern Virginia Basketball tournament.

The season had its ups and downs, but the biggest thrill perhaps occurred in the first game when the team ended state champion Wakefield's winning streak of twenty-six games.

Girls' Varsity Basketball . . . Raise That Score

Fran Clarke follows through hopefully as Claudia Sale comes in for a possible rebound.

Although the 1961-62 girls' Varsity Basketball team won only three of twelve games, they succeeded in doing their part toward building Fairfax spirit.

After tryouts in November, the Rebelettes began the hard practice, to orient themselves with the many skills required to play the game. New rules were added this year, allowing three dribbles instead of two, and the game proved to be more exciting, especially to those who participated.

Led by co-captains, Claudia Sale and Kit Snider, the girls worked hard. Teamwork was the motto and memories of butterflies before games, laps around the gym, old buses, and pep talks were the rewards of their basketball season.

Girls' J.V. Basketball . . . A Team That's On The Beam

g". here. I hope you can read 2 it

Doing better than their Varsity, the 1961-62 girls' Junior Varsity Basketball team rebounded with a five win, five loss and two tie record. High scorers were Laura Twitchell and Stephanie Issit. The teamwork displayed was something to be proud of, and the team showed great possibilities for the coming year.

Spirits were high in the beginning of the season, but they were even higher as the season progressed. Even postponed games due to weather didn't halter the girls' pep. Half-time oranges, chewing gum, and those many, many jump balls will be among some of the memories the Jay Vees will have, but Fairfax will remember them as a peppy Rebelette team representing their fine school.

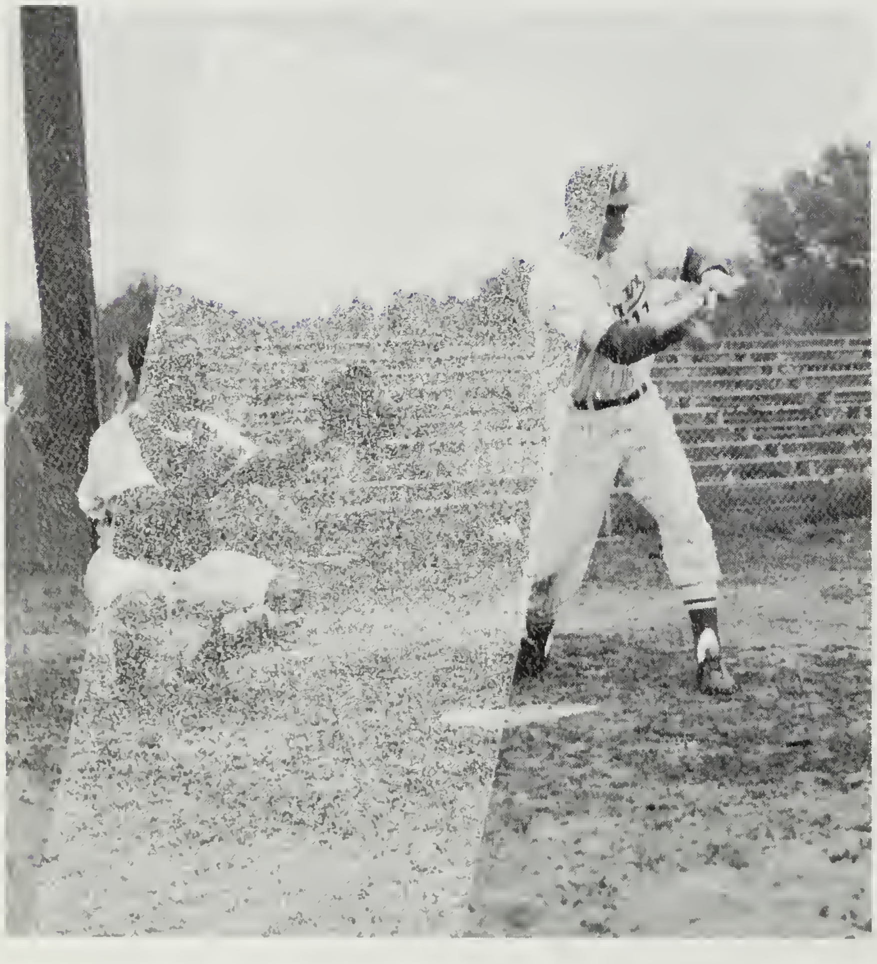
Varsity Baseball . . . On You Rebels, On You Rebels



Bill Thomas attempts to bunt his way to first base.

Full of desire to win and the ability to work closely together, the 1960-61 Varsity baseball team had a very successful season finishing with a 9-3 record, the Fairfax County Championship, and the Northern Virginia Baseball League co-champions. There were no real stars; however, in each game someone would make the game's winning play or drive in the winning run.

Jim Hall, not counted on to pitch a the beginning of the season, came through in fine fashion, with a no-hitter and three shutouts. Doug Davis' relief pitching saved many games and provided many thrills for the Rebel fans. Without any outstanding hitters, the team made the most of every hit and used all methods of getting runners on base and advancing them.

Under the fine tutelage of coaches Stalnaker and Moeller, the Rebels have been quite successful on the baseball diamond for the past four seasons with three county championships and two northern Virginia titles to their credit.

Thanks to the fine coaching effort on the part of Mr. Ferguson, the Junior Varsity came through the year with even marks, at five wins and five losses. Coach Ferguson's knowledge of the game, plus the spirit and determination of the players themselves, showed in the vast improvement of the boys during the season. The team was loaded with solid hitters, who came through in the Washington-Lee game, winning it 18-3.

Sparked by the pitching of Mike Dalponte, and Mike Flood, and hitting of Lars Anderson and Mike Hagan, the squad had a good year which produced many Varsity prospects.

Returning players are this year's team captain, Scott Fischer, with an 8-0 record, Bob Barnes with 7-1, and Jimmy Smith with 6-2; the remaining three positions will be competed for by several promising underclassmen.

Last year, their second in competition, the Golf Team placed first in Northern Virginia. Since the fans have become accustomed to success on the links, we can only hope that in future years, our winning tradition will be upheld.

Softball . . . We Are Rebels, Mighty, Mighty Rebels

The girls on our Softball teams, after a year of playing home games away, finally welcomed other schools to Rebel's own Softball field. These girls overcame such obstacles as broken bats, muddy fields, and postponed games, bringing glory to Fairfax with many high-scoring games. Even the thought of snow and freezing weather could not dampen their spirits, as they sang the songs of the "Kingston Trio," patched their ancient uniforms together with pins, and listened patiently to the advice of their coach, Miss Johnson.

The leading batters for Varsity were Anne Junek and Connie Webb. Connie also led with stealing the most bases. Leading pitchers were Seniors Dede Pollard, who struck out twenty-four batters, and Barbara Witul. On Junior Varsity, Mary Linda Witmire and Melinda Venable were leading hitters while Stephanie Issit was leading pitcher.

Surely our Softball teams—Varsity and Junior Varsity girls alike—successfully added their boost to our even-scoring Rebel Spirit.

Last year's track team, under the direction of Coach Al Grover, did surprisingly well despite the stumbling blocks of inexperience and lack of sufficient facilities. The team was coached by Mr. Renick and led by the fine playing of Kirk Stokes, Randy Waeshe, and Paul Haas; but up against strong opposition from more experienced teams such as Wakefield and Yorktown, they found their first year hard going.

Our players were hampered by the school's lack of adequate tennis courts, but were able to schedule their matches at the Court House Country Club. Although no letters were awarded for the first year, tennis has now become a popular spring sport.

Tradition Sprinkled With Novelty

Every year we enjoy the same traditional events, yet they are a little different, each year they are spiced with variety. While the sultry summer weather lingered, we got back into the swing of things with the Peppy and Johnny Dance. With the coming of autumn, we became busily engaged in the long anticipated activities of Homecoming. Soon a predatory glint appeared in the eyes of normally meek girls and once again a parade of ragged Lil' Abners and Daisy Maes made their way to the Sadie Hawkins Dance. Although the inevitable grayness set in, it failed to dampen our spirits as the atmosphere of our cafeteria was magically transformed from a "moonlight sleighride" to a "peppermint fantasy" in preparation for our winter dances. For Rebel theater-goers the Junior and Senior plays afforded excellent entertainment. As the year progressed, College Day and the Science Fair made us pause, and plan seriously for the future. International Relations Week and our exchange student did much to promote international understanding. Although this year was richly endowed with age-old traditions, they were given flavor by individual interpretation and novel ideas.

Peppy and Johnny exchange dances with Lord and Lady Fairfax.

Peppy And Johnny . . . Rebel Spirit Is The Password

A flurry of final arrangements by the Fair Facts staff members greeted us as we arrived at the dance to celebrate our 19-0 victory over James Madison and the crowning of our new representatives of Rebel spirit. We were pleased when Joan Lindenbaum and Bruce Kiely were announced as Peppy and Johnny Rebel. To our delight, Mr. Hills and Miss Winn were again chosen Lord and Lady Fairfax.

Tom Hill, Pat Williams, and Dick Boring came in the most authentic Dogpatch fashions.

Sadie Hawkins . . . Fashions From Dogpatch

As the Sadie Hawkins drew near, the normally shy girls sought out their victims and prepared for the coming occasion. Looking like hillbillies in our Dogpatch originals and vegetable corsages, we kept Marryin' Sam busy hitchin' unsuspecting guys and victoroius gals. Murals and signs prohibiting pigs and cows in the street helped to transform our gym into the strange little place called Dogpatch. All too soon Dogpatch fashions were packed away for another year and our half-eaten corsages were thrown away.

Homecoming . . . A Welcome To Alumni

With Blue and Gray as the theme of Homecoming, we excitedly prepared for the festivities of a memorable event. We worked hard to build prize-winning floats and prepare a warm welcome for the alumni. Homecoming began with the bonfire on Thursday to arouse our spirit and determination to win. At the Key Club Barbeque we were surrounded by alumni exclamining, "You haven't changed at all." During half-time ceremonies, Jeannie McDonald was crowned homecoming queen and began her reign. For the second consecutive year the class of '63 submitted the winning float. Elated by our victory over Falls Church, we attended the dance where we heard the alumni reminissing—"Remember when we . . ." At the dance Jeannie was presented with a football signed by all the team members. Although the evening was soon gone, our memories of a successful Homecoming with remain with us.

Sno-Ball . . . A Warm Memory Of A Cold Night

At the peak of the season of mistletoe and holly came the sno-ball. The new fallen snow helped create the atmosphere which took us on a "Moonlight Sleighride." When Ruth White mounted her sleigh and began her reign as Snoball Queen for 1961, we began to form the many warm memories of this cold night. With Christmas only two days away, the Snoball dance became one of the highlights of the Yuletide season.

The Sweetheart Court highlights the Sweetheart Dance.

Sweetheart . . . Cupid's Bow Was Busy

A huge flower bedecked valentine opened the way into a peppermint fanstasy on a February evening. Then the sweethearts and beaus found themselves in a maze of laughter, cupids and candy-cane decorations, and dancing. This event, that really began weeks before with the band members' extensive planning and preparation, was climaxed by the crowning of King Scott Fischer and Queen Gwen Hancock.

Our radiant queen, Gwen Hancock, reigns with King Scott Fischer over the annual Sweetheart Dance.

Let's twist again!

College Day . . . Planning For The Future

Mrs. Hopper listens to the questions Gail Newman asks this representative.

When college day came, it brought both hope and despair. Some of us were informed that we had a good chance of getting into the college of our choice, while others of us were told we should apply elsewhere. As juniors it was a time for us to decide what to aim for; as senior it was a time for us to make decisions about colleges. For everyone it was a time to plan for the future.

Junior Play . . . A Dabble In Drama For Juniors

As the presentation of the Junior Play drew near, signs began to appear around school announcing that "Eggs are Cheaper by the Dozen." The day the name of the play was announced, the juniors came to school dressed as children of the 1920's. Hard work and enthusiastic support from the actors and backstage crew helped "Cheaper By The Dozen" to draw the biggest opening night crowd in the history of Fairfax High School.

Senior Play . . . A Return To The Stage For Seniors

Exclamations of "I got a part!" and "I'm on a committee!" greeted us the day after tryouts for the Senior Play. Those of us who didn't get parts enthusiastically helped on our backstage and business committees. As we took our parts in FIRST LADY, we had to take on the attitudes of Senators and Senators' wives, and fight the battle of the nomination for the presidency. Since the auditorium was often in use, play rehearsal could be found in many odd places around the school, such as the library and the cafeteria. Lost play books, forgotten lines, and hard-to-find costumes were but a few of the obstacles we overcame to make FIRST LADY one of the most memorable Senior Plays in years.

Exchange Student . . . Strengthened International Ties

Hilke gets a taste of American social life with Bill Woods at a dance after a football game.

Hilke Haberman, our exchange student from Germany, came to us at a time when greater understanding was needed between countries. We anxiously made friends with her and helped her to adapt to our way of life. As Hilke gladly participated in all class and school activities, we learned that many of our ideas about Germany were false. While Hilke was here, many lasting friendships were formed and as a result, ties between our countries will be strengthened.

International Week . . . Small Nations

Mrs. Kouzes enthusiastically describes the activities of the United Nations Organization.

This year, for the third annual International Week, Student Government decided to make its official theme, "Peace Through Understanding," more meaningful by directing emphasis on nations in the world that are small and about which our knowledge was lacking.

These "Small Nations in Perspective" ranged from small, underdeveloped or newly-independent countries to those which make headlines in the news because of international turmoil or internal conflict.

With the idea that it is imperative that we have an understanding of these countries and organizations, including the United Nations and the Peace Corp, we attended informative lectures and contributed to discussions. Also, we attended the two-day International Week Fair with its attractive displays and well-informed exhibitors many of whom were students who had lived or traveled in the countries represented.

"Small Nations In Perspective" gave us insight, stimulated interest, and brought to mind pertinent questions that we had never considered. It was a week of discovery, and an educational experience which made a lasting impression.
